

Start by assigning each activity a difficulty value that can then be evenly distributed among the team members. Our leadership is responsible for dividing our activities and finding ways to distribute them so that everyone has the same workload. If there is one thing I would like to change, it is that we use a Scrum model because in this model there is a lot of communication in the team and I feel that we are missing something because many times we get confused at the beginning because each one has a different vision. Perhaps our process would have been faster and easier if we had used the Scrum model with the previous applications from the beginning.
